We Respond Flexibly To Changing Needs.

We understand that complex care needs are not static. It's why we always actively encourage people to communicate their needs. By ensuring our team understand why a behaviour occurs we can agree how best to respond. This gives people control over their support, without their needs being adversely affected by any changes that may occur.

Our individual homes are spacious and designed to cater to a range of requirements.

Each home can also be further adapted as part of a comprehensive environmental assessment.

Positive Behaviour Support (PBS) underpins everything we do. We help people to live the life they want by giving them as much choice, freedom, autonomy and independence as they are comfortable with, along with a positive approach to risk that allows a real quality of life.

The Right Support In The Right Environment

We understand that everyone is unique. As such we design homes around individuals needs and fully involved the person and others in their support network to strike the right balance.

Complex behaviour can occur for a number of reasons. Often as a response from someone who is unable to make themselves understood in any other way.

This can be due to unique communication difficulties associated with developmental differences, a learning disability or mental illness. It could also be physical or emotional pain, confusion, sensory experience, or any other unique experience. It can be exacerbated or evening triggered by a lack of understanding from support staff, over or under stimulation environment, physical illness and pain.

Not receiving the right support can also lead to people developing further challenging behaviour. That's why getting the right support in the right environment is vital to reducing challenging behaviour and ensuring a better quality of life.

Highly Skilled Staff Equipped With Specialist Training

The people we support benefit from a high level of staffing and support in our homes. Each one of our team is skilled in communication methods and least restrictive approaches. They work in a truly person-centred way using individualised positive behavioural support strategies.

We apply the principles of 'values based recruitment' for new staff. This means we recognise the importance of their value base, along with their attitude and commitment to the people we support, as much as their qualifications and experience. We are a living wage employer and place staff wellbeing and retention at the centre of everything we do. Experience tells us this translates into better outcomes and support for each person living in our homes.

Staff receive comprehensive inductions and specialist training that exceeds the minimum standards. This not only enables them to understand people with complex needs, but also ensures our teams are appropriately trained and resourced to meet the needs of the people we support. Staff then go on to develop specialisms in key competencies, such as supporting people with autism, speech and language difficulties and / or personality disorders, all of which can form key service gaps in community support options.

We train staff in the CITRUS model of support. This British Institute of Learning Disabilities (BILD) accredited training programme promotes positive communication, least restrictive practice and positive behavioural support plans developed within a person-centred framework. The CITRUS model follows the BILD PI training accreditation scheme and is part of the restraint reduction network.

We know that continuity of support is critical. That's why we maintain a consistent core team. All staff are supported to fulfil and develop their roles to promote career progression at all levels. Our management team access ongoing specialist training to constantly build capability in our services.

Professional input delivers early intervention, ongoing support and transitional care. This helps remove the common barriers for individuals to succeed in a community placement. Behavioural specialists are always accessible to provide an objective and alternative viewpoint day to day.

“We understand that everyone sees the world differently, so take the time to appreciate how that looks for each and every person we support”

Developing The Right Home Setting

The right support in the right environment can significantly contribute to settled community living and minimise potentially stressful situations. Everyone perceives the world in a different way, so we recognise this in how we design individual homes. This means careful consideration of what environment best suits a person's needs, ensuring it meets their expectations as a home they'd like to live in.

This approach offers highly individualised and personalised support in small local settings. We work with the individuals and key stakeholders involved to personally tailor their home to their specific requirements. In doing so we ensure any sensory and functional needs as met, as well as personal preferences.

We take care to create environments that support an independent quality of life. Addressing key design principles such as light and ventilation, acoustics, clear lines of sight and orientation, good proportion, reduction in detail and complexity, and most importantly, the ability to tailor different spaces for individual needs.

Our homes are also designed to meet best practice principles (for example, the Care Quality Commission's guidance on 'Registering the Right Support') and we incorporate technology to promote privacy, maximise safety and, particularly for people with autism, limit adverse sensory stimulation.

An Overview of Our Home

At The Bridge Care, we see the world through the eyes of the people we support. For each person living at Roundhay Wood Apartments, we create a home that's meaningful to their needs through direct consultation with them and the significant people in their lives. Roundhay Wood Apartments is located on Gledhow Wood Road in Roundhay, Leeds—a popular North Leeds district just three miles from the city centre and near the beautiful Roundhay Park. The property is a Grade II listed Georgian manor, converted into seven purpose-built, self-contained apartments. It sits within mature private grounds in a peaceful, leafy setting.

Each apartment has been newly developed to maintain the building's historic character while offering modern, spacious, and flexible accommodation. Every home includes its own front door, a bedroom, lounge, separate kitchen, and bathroom—featuring either a bath, wet room, or both. The generous floorplans allow individuals to live comfortably and independently. Additional rooms can be adapted into sensory spaces or used for daytime activities that support skill development and complement community-based resources.

The surrounding gardens include a variety of accessible outdoor spaces—from paved areas and enclosed lawns to woodland canopies. There is also ample parking, communal spaces, and designated staff areas to support day-to-day living.

We bring extensive experience in supporting individuals with complex and challenging needs. Our management team are trained ARC facilitators, and we use a BILD-accredited support model alongside Positive Behaviour Support (PBS) practitioners. This allows us to deliver a tailored, progressive approach that enables, stabilises, and improves outcomes for those we support.

Who We Support

We provide community registered homes for people who require comprehensive support plans and have struggled to settle in alternative forms of accommodation due to their complex needs and behaviours that challenge.

It is anticipated that in many cases existing legal frameworks may exist around an individual or be required in-order-to deliver ongoing care within The Bridge Care. We deliver person-centred, outcome-based support.

This will be focused to meet the requirements of those with the following needs.

1. Individuals who have been deemed as difficult to place in alternative settings, or are looking to step down from a hospital setting.

2. People with autism with associated complex needs and behaviours that are perceived to challenge services.

3. Individuals with a learning disability and forensic histories who potentially pose a significant risk to themselves and others.

4. Older children with learning disabilities and/or autism coming through transition services to adult services (16+) who require higher levels of support.
